

ROTC Aid Is 'Angel' To Kids

TAN SON NHUT AB (Special)
— Because of the help of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps Angel Flight at Mississippi State University in State College, Miss., the children at the Saigon Malnutrition Center have some new clothes and toys.

The Angel Flight recently collected the clothing and toys as one of their special community relations projects.

The Saigon Malnutrition Center, or "House of Love" as it is called, was started in Saigon by wives of American servicemen in 1962. Now it is run by American, French and Vietnamese Sisters of Charity.

Air Force servicemen in Vietnam help the center as a community relations project. The center is supported by the men and their families and by donors in the United States such as the Angel Flight.

There are 120 children at the center. Their ages range from new-born to 7 years old. The children, mostly orphans, come from refugee camps, hospitals and villages throughout Vietnam.
